

GRADUATE SCHOOL MENTORSHIP PROGRAM

The Graduate School Mentorship Program matches undergraduate and graduate students in mentoring relationships. The goals of the program are twofold: first, to expose undergraduate students to the graduate experience as they consider options and make decisions about post-baccalaureate study and as they transition from undergraduate to graduate student status, and secondly, to provide graduate students with the opportunity to develop mentoring skills as they share their own personal experiences with the undergraduate participants in the program. Complete information about the program (<http://www.graduate.vcu.edu/development/mentorship.html>) is available on the Graduate School website.
