

MISSION

The VCU School of Population Health is committed to improving health and well-being for all populations through education, discovery, knowledge dissemination and co-learning from the communities it serves. To fulfill this mission the VCU School of Population Health:

- Cultivates innovative thought leaders and creative scholars; informs communities; and trains a diverse workforce equipped to serve Virginians, the nation and the world
- Leads research that is collaborative, rigorous and impactful, and that promotes opportunities for all populations to have equitable health and well-being
- Focuses on diverse populations with an emphasis on those who experience a disproportionate burden of illness or adverse outcomes to enhance opportunities for vibrant and healthy lives as a result of the school's education, research, practice and service.
